women – particularly first-time mothers – frequently feel unsupported when they come to feed their baby. This new experience often takes place in the impersonal and medicalized surroundings of a hospital maternity ward where women are 'seen to' by overworked midwives.

Infant feeding - RCM

Breastfeeding is an unequalled way of providing ideal food for the healthy growth and development of infants. It is also an integral part of the reproductive process with important implications for the health of mothers. Breast milk provides all the energy and nutrients that the infant needs for the first months of life.

Breastfeeding In Hospital Mothers Midwives

Here the midwife is woman-centred, focuses on the mother-baby relationship and uses a 'hands-off' approach during breastfeeding support. Most midwives seem to naturally favour the hands-off role of being a skilled companion but working in a busy hospital setting doesn't always support this, leaving most limited to the role of technical expert (Swerts et al. 2016).
