Caring for a Child with Disabilities | AboutAssistedLiving.org

As hard as the decision may be, there may come a time where a child with a disability requires 24-hour nursing care. When the medical needs are too complex to be provided by only a family member, or if there are no family members available to provide the care, full-time nursing care may be the most appropriate option. It is possible to provide 24-hour per day skilled nursing care in the home setting with the assistance of home health nurses and other professionals.
