The Architecture Of Language (Oip) (Oxford India ...

The Parallel Architecture is a linguistic theory in which (1) the generative power of language is divided among phonology, syntax, and semantics; and (2) words, idioms, morphological affixes, and phrase structure rules are stored in the lexicon in a common format. This formalization leads to a theory of language processing in which the "competence" grammar is put to work directly in "performance," and which is compatible with psycholinguistic evidence concerning lexical retrieval ...
